Take Point, which are Eastern oysters developed in Shalwater bay, are unlike all others—good at any season of the year. They are fat and delicious. Craw-fish are now just in season and are excellent eating, as are crabs and all the other numerous delicacies served so skillfully at the Take Point oyster house on Eleventh street.

The plaintiffs in the case of the State of Oregon vs. Samuel Schmidt and Bernhard Lindenberg, accused of unlawfully having sturgeon in their possession, were arranged in the circuit court yesterday. Judge McBride issued an order giving them until next week to enter their pleas. The outcome of the case is awaited with interest.

A tumbler bicycle was stolen from Frank Woodfield a few days ago, and yesterday was returned to the owner by Chief of Police Hallbeck. The wheel had been left at the New Style Chop House to secure payment for a 50-cent bill, the thief having guaranteed to call the following day and redeem the property. Doubtless the fellow was badly in need of a meal and, having recovered his property, Mr. Woodfield is not at all sorry the hungry man took that means of getting it.

Mrs. Henry Wahallito, the woman who mysteriously disappeared from a West-bound train a short distance out of St. Louis, has, according to further advices received from the Missouri metropolis, been located at Sullivan, that state. The dispatch says she is "sound in body," but no reference is made to her mental condition. It is thought the woman was temporarily demented when she left the train. Her husband will go to Missouri at once and bring her to this city.

Manuel Gates, the murderer of Captain William Benson, of Astoria, must suffer the penalty of his crime. Yesterday John D. McGowan received telegraphic advices from Olympia that the supreme court of the State of Washington had refused to grant Gates a new trial, thus settling the case. The murder of Captain Benson occurred on Willapa bay and was one of the most dastardly crimes ever committed in this part of the country. Circumstantial evidence pointed strongly to the guilt of Gates and he was arrested, tried and convicted. The McGowan firm, for whom Captain Benson operated a launch, was instrumental to a large extent in running down the murderer.

At yesterday's session of the county court, Judge Gray and Commissioner Young being present, bids for the construction of a bridge over the Necanicum were opened. Three offers were submitted, as follows: N. Clinton & Son, $900 and $2.50 per foot for the approaches, aggregating $1025; Jonas Unten and Andrew Lampe, $600 and $2.50 for two different kinds of bridge; Charles Johnson and John Volmer, $575 and 80 cents per foot for the approaches. As there were irregularities in one of the bids submitted, it was decided to refer the matter to the next county court, which will assume control of the affairs of the county on July 7. Accordingly, the contract for the work was not awarded yesterday.

The run of fish yesterday was reported to be just a trifle better than on the previous day. The receipts of large fish were greater than on Wednesday, and the fishermen seem confident that the anticipated July run of fish weighing between 25 and 50 pounds will surely materialize. The men with the light mesh nets feel that their day is soon to come, and the men are preparing for a busy spell. The fish now being taken are of excellent quality and the July run will be equally fine. Renewed activity is to be noticed at the several packing houses, and the indications are that there will be much new gear in the water next month. The seafarers are still suffering poorly, but the water is now going down and seining conditions will soon be favorable.

The Wielmann Company last night presented Dion Bonicelli's great drama, "The Sea of Ice," at Fishers' opera house, which was crowded to doors with an enthusiastic and highly appreciative audience. The play is one which requires unusually elaborate scenic accessories and no detail was slighted at last night's performance. The final scenes of the second act being particularly realistic. This afternoon the laughable farce "A Steam Laundry" will be put on as a special matinee attraction. This evening "The Great Divorce Case," one of the strangest society dramas ever written, will be presented. The Wielmann Company has given a series of first-class productions this season, and it may be sure of a hearty welcome, should it return next season.

Recently a West Astoria fisherman caught a large sea-lion in his net and succeeded in getting the monster ashore. It was an attraction in West Astoria for several days. The fisherman wanted to turn it over to the city park commission, but that body is not yet prepared to care for zoo exhibits. The fisherman was left with a sea-lion on his hands. Yesterday he determined to rid himself of it, and it was placed in the water inside the railroad track. A man armed with a double-barrel shotgun soon killed the sea-lion's head with buckshot. The monster might have escaped were it not for the piling which surrounded it on every side, and frightened it so it would not attempt to swim out toward the channel. Quite often seals get inside the piling and are so frightened that their capture is rendered easy.

A daring burglary occurred at a Lindenberg fish scow at Point Elsie, on the north shore, shortly after midnight yesterday morning, and the robbers have made good their escape with the plunder. The fish scow was in charge of Matt Frederickson, who is always well supplied with money for fish-buying purposes. No doubt the robbers were well acquainted with this fact. Shortly after midnight a fishing boat containing two men came alongside the scow, and Frederickson opened the door to see what the men wanted. As he stepped outside a sack was placed over his head and his arms were pinioned. Then the men raged him and proceeded to search the scow for money. They found about $250. After securing the money they took their departure and, as it was some time before Keeper Frederickson could free himself, the men had made good their escape in the darkness. Frederickson neither saw their faces nor heard their voices, and is at a loss to know who the robbers could have been.

The Eagles' excursion to Cathlamet will take place tomorrow, the steamer Hassalo leaving her wharf at 8 o'clock. The famous Eagles' band will accompany the excursionists, and an orchestra will also be along to furnish dance music. From President J. N. Laws down to the baby Eagle, every member of the popular order will do all in his power to make matters interesting for those who go to Cathlamet, and that the trip will prove a great success is a foregone conclusion. The excursion to Cathlamet involves a display of public spirit that is not generally known. The Eagles could have given an excursion to some other point at much less outlay, but they felt that the up-river people should be encouraged to visit Astoria on the Fourth and therefore decided upon Cathlamet as the objective point. The lodge has shown more than customary public spirit on many occasions, and the people of the city will doubtless show their appreciation by patronizing the excursion arranged for tomorrow. There is plenty of room for all who wish to attend, and those who have not secured tickets should do so today. A program of sport has been arranged, and it will certainly be the greatest day in the history of Cathlamet.

The remains of the late William Hume have been taken to Portland, and the funeral will be held at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon. The death of the pioneer canneryman has caused genuine regret wherever he was known and the funeral will be attended by a large number of Portland acquaintances of the deceased. In the '80s Mr. Hume, who was very much opposed to the employment of Chinese labor in his packing house, secured a crew of white men. The experiment proved a costly one, and before the season was over Mr. Hume was compelled to discharge all his white employees and substitute Chinese. The white men were mostly from Portland and refused to do their work. The experiment settled for all time what might have proved a most perplexing question. Many people doubtless thought it strange that the wealthy packer should have chosen the quiet little town of Eagle Cliff as his place of abode, but those who knew the fine old gentleman's love of life near the forests appreciated his reason for residing at that point. His peaceful passing was quite in keeping with the career of Mr. Hume, whose life was one succession of kindly acts.

HAD A PLEASANT TRIP.

Astorian Defeated at Bowling, but Delighted With Portland Visit.

The defeat administered to the Astoria Commercial Club bowling team on the Portland Commercial alleys was not a crushing one, by any means, and the outcome of the match was as much a surprise to the locals as to the visiting team. The first game bowled by the Astorians was a scorcher, but 64 pins ahead of that of the Portland team. Hard, hard luck characterized the second, third and fourth games, and the work of the visitors was much better than the scores indicate. The last game looked like a cinch for the visitors, who had a comfortable lead at the half. Then came the disastrous centers, while the home team "smoked up," and the final game was won by the Portlanders.

The Astorians had several difficulties with which to contend, the principal one being poor kinspins. Even the Portland bowlers suffered greatly from centers, and the only really good total of the night was made by Dr. Bierdorf, who scored 177.

Before the departure of the Astoria Ulyterofna h Vrydu vbz vxz vxz team for Portland, Mr. Wise presented each member of the team with one of the handsome club emblems recently adopted.
